Can you imagine being one of the mothers who brought their little ones to the Rabbi? You have heard that Jesus has been doing amazing things: healing the sick, casting out demons, even raising the dead. If he has such power, its safe to assume that he is a person who is close to God. And if he's close to God, if you can get your little one close to him, then perhaps he can put in a good word for you.

Can you imagine getting there and hearing from his disciples, "Go away. We don't have time for this stuff. The Rabbi is busy with important things, and doesn't have time for children."

Can you imagine the pain of being turned away by the people of God when you had come longing for a blessing?

In the story, we don't have to imagine how Jesus felt about it: he was indignant. "Do not send them away! The kingdom of heaven belongs to little one's just like these. Bring them here - don't stop them!"

Can you imagine watching as the Master takes you're little child in his arms? As those rough, carpenters hands support your little one's body and head, and he looks up to his father in heaven and prays. Can you imagine the wonder of having your little one blessed by that man?

But then he turns and says a most amazing thing to his disciples: "These little one's know how to receive the kingdom of God. Unless you receive the kingdom the way a child does, you won't enter the kingdom."

Pay attention to the kids, because the kingdom belongs to kids. Learn to trust the way a child trusts, to surrender to something bigger than yourself the way little ones know to do, to open your heart the way children will throw their hearts open because they know they need to be loved. Learn, or wise ones, from the children. Love the little teachers, because they know what we grow up to forget: we are all in desperate need of God.

Can you imagine walking away from that encounter. How do you think you would feel? You would be leaving having achieved your goal - getting a blessing placed upon your child by the Rabbi. But you would also have received more than that blessing. You would have learned something that make the wise full of wonder - that God wants us to have faith like children, and that the wise pay attention to children because of all they have to teach we who think we know so much more than they.

Can you imagine learning something so precious ... and then forgetting it?

No! No! A thousand times no! May it never be.

Only a fool would learn something so precious from Jesus as the importance of these little ones. Only a crazy person would let the wonder of it slide away from their minds. Don't let it be us.

Can you imagine a world where everyone knew to pay attention to the children?
