Worship is a matter of the heart, but it is also a matter of the mind. In fact, the thing that makes Christian worship Christian is the information it contains. Christianity is a faith loaded with reasonable and rational content to be believed, and it is the rehearsal of and encounter with that content that makes Christian worship what it is.

We Christians are not the only humans that worship on this planet. In fact, all human beings devote themselves to something, and we all have to come to grips with the mysterious facts of our experiences. We are capable of complex and abstract thought, so we are more than our bodies. It is a universal human yearning to transcend our mortality and reach into the depths of the mystery beyond ourselves. We long to feel and experience something wondrous. All human beings year for a worship experience.

But not all human beings do that though the story of the resurrected, savior King of the universe. When we Christians worship, we do it through the stories of Jesus and of Israel, and all of the wondrous ideas that God has given us in the Bible. It is through rational concepts and stories that God leads us to himself.

If we are not moved in our hearts, then we are not worshipping. Merely thinking true things is not worship. The Devil can think of true things, but he's never moved to worship God. If we are going to worship, we have to allow the truths we tell ourselves to touch our hearts. If we never feel a string in our souls, if we never tremble at God's word, then we do not worship Him.

At the same time, if our minds are not engaged when we worship, then we may be feeling a lot of powerful things, but we are not worshipping God. We are not even thinking of him. God wants us to remind ourselves of all his wonderful acts, and to remember them in our minds. Christian worship is a matter of the heart, but it is a heart in motion guided by an engaged mind.

All of this brings us to singing. The reason that we sing is because music moves the heart. But we don't use merely irrational music. We sing. Singing involves the speaking of lyrics to ourselves, to each other, and to God. The beauty of the music may help us to pay attention, and may stir our emotions, making the moving of the heart easier. But it is the thoughts that we lift in song that compels us to engage with God with both our minds and hearts.

When we sing, we expose our minds and hearts to the Word of God. Some songs are the words of Scripture set to tune, and others are the thoughts drawn from Scripture and made into songs. Other songs are prayers - praise and expressions of devotion that we sing to God to bind ourselves to him. These thoughts pass through our minds to our hearts and move us to worship God.

This morning as you worship God by singing to him, sing with both your heart and your mind.
